Stribling makes alliance across the pond

May 20, 2010 01:45PM

Residential brokerage Stribling & Associates has joined forces with London-based real estate services company Savills, forming a professional association, according to Stribling representatives. The association is meant to help Stribling's "client's homes reach the widest possible market," according to founder Elizabeth Stribling, while giving Savills an entree into the U.S. market. Attorneys Jay Neveloff and Steve Senir of Levin Naftalis & Frankel represented Stribling in the formation of the association. As The Real Deal previously reported, Stribling has also recently expanded its grasp to Italy, taking on listings in Tuscany and beyond. TRD
