

NEW YORK OBSERVER

<http://www.observer.com/2011/06/everything-here-looks-frosted/>

June 21, 2011

Everything Here Looks Frosted

By Pamela Engel

This over-the-top midtown penthouse attempts to look luxurious through gratuitous use of shiny materials (but we're not so sure it's working). The floors are granite, and the living room is decorated with metallic-looking couches and shiny lamps.

To be fair, the listing says the penthouse condo is “the model of elegance and sophistication” with its 24-hour doorman, built in cappuccino and espresso maker, “Venetian plaster” and automated shades.

The 2,950-square-foot condo, at 60 East 55th Street, is asking $11.95 million for three bedrooms and three baths (and access to “Manhattan’s most exclusive private social club,” the Core Club).

You need an aerial shot to capture the height of this living room (and its ridiculous chandelier).

This living room looks like it belongs in a modern Narnia. Everything is frosted, shiny or metallic.

This kitchen is blindingly shiny—might be a bit much in the morning.

Not much room to move out on this terrace, but boy is that a good view.

Minimalist to the extreme. A bedroom with just a bed.

Even the bathroom has a great view.

Various methods may be used to determine floor area. Any quoted floor areas are approximate and exceed the usable area of the premises. Stribling has not verified and makes no representation as to (i) the dimensions of and/or the actual square footage of the premises, or (ii) whether the use of any room or area for the purpose shown (e.g., bedroom, kitchen, etc.) complies with applicable law.

The floor plan.